

Volume Two: Issue Forty Nine

October/November, 2009

It is the time of year when the air is filled with thoughts of giving. Christmas is fast approaching and even if not celebrated by all, the concept of gift giving will be felt and experienced to the degree one wishes to participate.

Carita has designed a calendar for 2010. She has named it Reflections.

The images were captured through the lens of her camera. To find out more please refer to Carita's advertisement in this issue.

From the Editor

In this issue it seems that the theme is celebration... in the article the focus is more on the year - are we, have we, what has it meant to me?

In Patrick's commentary his focus is on here and now with abundance being reflected in living a prosperous life.

Of course humour is as always an important portion and it is offered in the space between.

We then offer a new poet to our newsletter. Her name is Tumi Langa - a South African who lives in Spain. Her poem is called Eternity - it is about connection, connecting and reconnecting...

Finally we come to the advertisements. As signposted above, Carita has created a beautiful calendar for 2010. Adelaidians are asked to order their copy through me, whilst interstate and overseas orders can be directed to Carita as per instruction in advertisement.

The third module of You, Me and the Space Between is being offered shortly in Adelaide. The theme is CELEBRATION. Please let Nina know if you will be a participant before the first night.

Hope you enjoy this perhaps 'long awaited' double issue keeping in touch with you and WDHR.

In this Year of Celebration...

by Janet Corbett

In this Year of Celebration, a year almost complete, I thought it worthwhile reflecting upon the myriad of ways of celebrating life, just to see if I had captured this moment enough, recognised what celebrating meant to me, and been aware enough to hike a lift on the wave of celebration that I may have been witness to from a distance. Has it changed me? Have I grown? We invite you to take a similar journey if you so wish.

I remember many, many years ago before my conscious involvement in metaphysics, being involved in a space of personal growth. We would work in blocks of 6 weeks at changing what we didn't like happening in our lives to how we wanted our lives to be. At the beginning of this 6-week block, every time, we were asked what we wanted to achieve. If what we stated was considered too big for the time-frame, we would be offered smaller steps and when this felt right, we would state that desired outcome. This was then written down for posterity and forgotten by the person making the proclamation until being reminded at the end of 6 weeks with the question, Do you think you achieved what you set out to achieve?

I always had to ask what did I say. I had completely forgotten. Upon reflection I knew I had immersed myself in the unfolding journey as circumstances revealed what next. Without exception, when reminded of what I had stated, I had achieved that intention. I attended this space for two years and without it being named as such, I was repeatedly exposed to the concept of setting intent and letting it go to experience life in a heightened sense of awareness. I wasn't as thoroughly aware though of the power existing in such life – perhaps then was too soon.

In this vein, have I, have you, achieved what we set out to achieve in celebrating life, even if we had forgotten the connection we made and ensuing commitment undertaken to take full advantage and more consciously celebrate in this Year of Celebration?

Well my life is my business and I'm not about to write a journal or diary but I will share some moments after first looking at what celebrating life might mean beyond the obvious. There is much that happens in one's day – much involves the essential tasks but even here there is opportunity to celebrate. Words spoken that resonate a truth you had forgotten, gestures of 'thankyou' and 'hello' and even a smile from a stranger hold much opportunity to be grateful for creating such a happy landscape. Even the jolt received from an unexpected demand can make it possible to catch a wave of clarity that leads one more quickly to a beautiful destination, when one might have been stewing in the juices of procrastination for far too long. Of course one needs to act without indignation or disgust for always the experience contains the seeds of what we have sewn. Have we celebrated all of it enough?

The meaning of life
is to experience.
Eric Pepin,
The Handbook of the Navigator (p.125)

The following video contains much wisdom and therefore clarity in understanding there is always cause to celebrate life. It may just be when something is not understood, particularly when on a conscious journey that doesn't appear to be unfolding as one would like, that consternation turns to doubt, doubt turns to disillusionment and disillusionment becomes depression. Click HERE to watch this video and see what you think...

Lets then assume there is no reason not to celebrate life and that if or when we feel out of sorts with it, it just may be, as in part the video suggests, we weren't valuing ourselves enough to take leave from a situation or thought when it didn't 'feel good'.

So what is 'celebrating life'?

We have heard of the notion that "life is a gift and as such gifts are received". It has only been recent that I can honestly say I now realize that gift – simply because I understand better and am experiencing more frequently that I am not this body. The words are not coming at me; the feeling is coming from within me. May I suggest downloading free of charge the book Patrick recently referred to attendees at the second module of You, Me and the Space Between in Adelaide, and glean for yourself what you may. The title is, The Handbook of the Navigator. It can be downloaded from <http://www.navigatorhandbook.com>

Some weeks ago I was watching Australian Idol. It was early days in the competition. One contestant named Stan had attracted my attention the previous week. I was so impressed by one of his 'off the cuff' comments that I quoted him in the last newsletter. This particular week he sang a song called Purple Rain. He received a standing ovation from judges and audience and other contestants. After judges comments the compare asked him a question. He asked, what happened in that moment, that pause you had on stage just before you started singing the song? Stan didn't answer immediately. He thought a moment before saying, I don't know... I just humbled myself. Stan doesn't seem to take himself seriously. If he stuffs up he laughs. If people like what he does he laughs. At his original audition he wasn't sure he would get through because he kept laughing especially when the compare interviewed him beforehand. But when he steps up to sing, his song can be heard and when the judges give their judgement, he listens with what seems to be an open mind desirous of learning and growing from each new experience. How is that a celebration? It just is.

Upon reflection then, celebrating life can be regarded as any act, big or small, surrounded by people or alone, that recognizes and in so doing celebrates the gift of life in any moment. I would like to add a suggestion that this moment may be a single reflective one, that recognizes a journey of highs and lows, concerns and regrets as well as joyous moments as a single thread peculiar to oneself that may have been initiated to assist in the raising and/or keeping of one's resonance. It is up to the individual to decide what this year has been. The reflective moment can only be a valuable exercise taking no time at all.

wrong?"

Eternity

by Reitumetse Langa

Infancy is not a phase but a way to see the world perhaps..
Infancy is questions, uncertainty and certainty alike
Infancy is taking steps with hope in them
Hope to run and fly, surrendering to Supremeness.
Infancy has yet to be understood and remembered. But will it ever?

The infant is the mystic.
Eyes ever rolling like waves of water,
Rolling around the world, ever glimpsing
Deeper and deeper into the futuristic pastime
And dwelling everywhere, somewhere and who knows where.

Here is an opportunity filled with God.
Goddess by her side.
Just take my hand. The infant in me has yet to be achieved.
I wish to recall my infant young, old, creator, creature.
Become me. Let me be born in thee.
So I can cry like you again.
And know purity like you again.
And not understand anymore again.

Current Events...

by Patrick Desplace

Hello there,

As most of you know our Daughter Isabel married Damien (with the armed forces), in October. When I marched her to her new husband, I requested a 10-day cooling off period before handing her over! Well, now it is over 10 days, so I suppose I cannot change my mind! It was a glorious wedding and they appear to be happier together than I have known them to be since they got together – guess marriage does work at times...

Isabel is casually abundant and is Celebrating Life. Those of you who have worked with the new recording of Lazaris: “Engaging the Unbridled Magic of Respecting and Honouring”, are aware that this year has been nominated as the year of Abundance... I do believe that it is – at least for us here in Australia! I know that the local Metaphysicians have had something to do with that – South Africa is also seriously “Abundant”; however some insist in self inflicted limitations - a touch of masochism perhaps?

Only a few days ago I was watching the show “Deal or No Deal”. (After a few minutes into the show, before the “dealing” begins I can usually say quite accurately what the outcome will be – you can always identify a winner or a loser). The other day, the fellow demonstrated clearly the resonance of a winner. He had only three cases left to open and he had the biggest three greens still into place. The Host told him “you are doing very well indeed!” He replied: “So far I have done very well!”. He emphasized and energised the words “So Far” – I knew he was done for. At that moment his resonance shifted and I could see a metamorphosis clearly happening as he became a loser. The next three cases were the two largest greens and the $20K! If only he had answered, “Yes, I AM!”

At the end of days, there is rarely a second chance. To make the most of the present Wave of Celebration and Abundance we need to be vigilant, alert and grateful with anticipation - I use the word Grateful on purpose. I know people who are right now taking a leap into abundance, celebration and appreciation... at times I am somewhat scared for them, just in case they are not able to maintain their resonance... I tend to be too protective of my people!

Time and mind are inseparable.
Remove time from
the mind and it
stops - unless you
choose to use it.

Eckhart Tolle
The Power of Now

The earth is doing well – lots of rumbles, some more significant than others but significant mostly because of the frequency – more earthquakes (clusters) than ever before. I anticipate a few impressive volcanoes in a near future – within 20 months. This will somewhat “Shrink” the diameter of the planet, causing major flooding of most low-lying coastal regions. The Quakes will then somewhat reorganise the planet – Lake Eyre is likely to become connected to the ocean near Port Augusta... and the Dead Sea should also become connected to the sea. Iran is most likely to experience a good shake.

Also it is not publicized, Pakistan is contemplating! “Nuking” the Taliban from their mountainous hideouts. The West have two nuclear devices unaccounted for and Iran paid well for them – Iran doubts that they will have time to build their own and they are not fussy where they come from.

With the Waves of Abundance and prosperity overwhelming our world, many are going to unprecedented length in order to maintain or improve their lifestyle – over Eight Billion Dollars of goods were shoplifted in England alone over the past 12 months... much more in Europe and the US. Here in Australia it is mostly fuel that is being stolen – people drive off without paying the service stations.

From time to time I am visited by Jehovah Witnesses - I am rather polite as I admire their courage and am sure they experience lots of rejection. I was asked whether I thought there was hope that the world violence would ever end and if I had an answer to resolve the situation. I answered that indeed I had a foolproof solution: Abolish all religions was my recommendation. I pointed out the Crusades, The Irish tribal slaughter in the name of Christ, the torture and slaughter of 15 Millions Women by the Inquisition, Islam , Judaism ... all Barbaric and performing the work of the dark side. It is so evident; I cannot understand that so few can see it... read The Handbook of the Navigator - free download referred to in the article In This Year of Celebration.

"Ed Mitchell was the sixth man to land on the moon. On his return in the Apollo 14 command module, he experienced the strangest feeling he would ever have; a feeling of connectedness, as if all the planets and all the people of all time were attached by some invisible web. ...Everything he'd been taught about the universe and the separateness of people and things felt wrong. This wasn't something he was simply comprehending in his mind, but an overwhelmingly visceral feeling, as though he were physically extending out of the window to the very furthest reaches of the cosmos."

In Buddhist iconography, enlightenment is represented by the opening of a third eye.... the third eye does not open on a hidden world, somewhere beyond; it only represents really seeing what is in this one. To put the meaning of life somewhere outside it is to make life itself empty. Just the way things are is quite enough to evoke awe and wonder.

Reflections Through Water – The Earth In Her Natural Splendour

How beautiful is this Earth when left to BE & grow harmoniously without the interference of humankind. My internet explorations reveal the majority of new species are discovered in habitats that are least hospitable to humankind. So humans, either, had not found them or could not access them, as they were too dangerous. That says a lot to me.

I have been blessed in these past few months with some extraordinarily beautiful reflections through water. I found myself drawn to finding creeks and rivers and following them, slowly, wondrously – what will you reveal to me today? My breath is still taken away by some of these amazing gifts of experience.

This is a limited edition calendar. I intend to create a maximum of 100. You can preview it HERE
